

GLOBAL HEALTH (GBL_HLTH)

GBL_HLTH 302-0 Global Bioethics (1 Unit)

Global health is a popular field of work and study for Americans, but though entered with the best of intentions, the work is beset with ethical questions, concerns, and dilemmas. In this course, students will assess emblematic ethical challenges in global health and consider approaches to addressing them.

*Ethical and Evaluative Thinking Foundational Disci Ethics Values Distro Area
Global Perspectives on Power, Justice, and Equity*

GBL_HLTH 390-0 Special Topics in Global Health (1 Unit)

Advanced work in areas of developing interest and special significance. Can be repeated for credit with a different topic. Offered on campus and on Northwestern programs abroad. Recent courses include Ecology of Infant Feeding, Native American Health, and Public Health and Mental Health in Serbia.